TUSIAD Board wraps up Washington visit

The President of the Board of Directors of the Turkish Industry and Business Association (TUSIAD) Ümit Boyner led a delegation to Washington, DC for talks on U.S.-Turkey relations on December 4-5, 2012.

The TUSIAD delegation met Assistant Secretary of State for Economic and Business Affairs Jose Fernandez and exchanged views on improving economic relations between Turkey and the United States. The visiting delegation also met Congressmen Gregory Meeks and Dan Burton and discussed prospects for U.S.-Turkey political relations. Congresswoman Virginia Foxx hosted a reception at the Capitol Hill Club for TUSIAD and the delegation had the opportunity to meet with members and their staff. Among the many distinguished guests, Boyner met House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairwoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen. The Congressional outreach was sponsored by the Turkish Coalition of America, a leading Turkish-American organization.

TUSIAD President Ümit Boyner spoke at a conference hosted by The Brookings Institution exploring “The Next Phase of the U.S.-Turkey Strategic Partnership.” The event marked the launch of the TUSIAD U.S.-Turkey Forum at Brookings, a partnership focusing on U.S.-Turkey bilateral relations and Turkey’s role in the world. During the event, Professor Kemal Kirişçi was introduced as the “TUSIAD Senior Fellow” at Brookings.

Boyner was invited to Washington to attend the World Bank Knowledge Advisory Commission meeting held on Monday, December 3. The Knowledge Advisory Commission (KAC) is a recently constituted external body whose role is to provide the President and Senior Management of the World Bank with advice on the global development knowledge agenda.

NATO approves Patriot deployment in Turkey

NATO approved Turkey's request to augment its air defense against a potential cross-border attack from Syria on December 4. The deployment of Patriot systems will likely take place in early 2013, as technical work to determine the number of batteries and sites (to be decided by the SACEUR, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe) as well as the completion of the national approval processes of the countries who will provide the systems.

Germany's Cabinet approved on November 6 sending German Patriot air defense missiles to Turkey. Defense Minister Thomas de Maiziere said that two batteries with a total of 400 soldiers would be sent to the border area under NATO command for one year, although the deployment could be shortened. The following day, the Netherlands approved to send two batteries as well as a maximum of 360 troops.

The NATO mission is expected to include up to six batteries, and a U.S. decision to contribute to the process will be decisive in finalizing the plan. Washington strongly supported Turkey's demand in the NATO but is still silent on its contribution. Both Turkish and American officials recalled that a decision on this issue is yet to be finalized.

U.S. extends waiver on Iranian embargo

The United States has renewed the 180-day waivers on Iran sanctions to Turkey, China, India and a number of other countries in exchange for their cutting purchases of oil from the Islamic Republic. One day before Turkey's exemption from U.S. sanctions ended, deputy prime minister announced that the Turkish national oil company, Tüpraş, will further cut its purchases of oil from Iran by 20 percent.

Meanwhile, U.S. diplomats have been in talks with Ankara over the flow of gold from Turkey in exchange for Iranian natural gas, the State Department said on December 4. "We continue, obviously, to consult closely with Turkey – as we do with all the countries – on the scope of U.S. sanctions against Iran," State Department spokesman Mark Toner told reporters at a daily briefing. The U.S. Senate last week resoundingly approved a third round of sanctions that target loopholes including the flow of gold from Turkey to Iran in payment for natural gas exports.

Turkey has not received any new request from the United States to reduce the level of its crude oil purchases from Iran and is continuing with its existing level of imports, Turkish Energy Minister Taner Yıldız told Reuters the following the meetings.

Turkey tops list for record number of imprisoned journalists

The U.S.-based Committee to Protect Journalists said it identified 232 writers, editors, and photojournalists behind bars in the world as of Dec. 1, an increase of 53 from 2011 figures and a record number since the group began counting in 1990. Turkey currently holds more journalists — 49 — than any other country, the group said. Dozens of those imprisoned are Kurdish reporters and editors held on terror-related charges and anti-government plots.

Turkey to launch second observation satellite

Turkey's second home-made earth observation satellite, Gokturk-2, will be launched into space from China on December 19. Gokturk-2 will be the first National Earth Observation Satellite, which has been produced by the Scientific and Technological Research Council of Turkey (TUBITAK) and Turkish Aerospace Industries. Gokturk-2 satellite, with 2.5 meters of resolution, will be used for the image requirements of the Turkish Armed Forces as well as other institutions that require satellite images for agriculture, transportation and urban development.

ECONOMY / ENERGY

Turkey third-quarter GDP slows to lowest level since 2009

Turkey's economic growth eased to the slowest pace since 2009 in the third quarter, challenging the government's year-end growth target and reinforcing expectations that the central bank will cut interest rates. Gross domestic product advanced 1.6 percent on an annual basis after climbing a revised 3 percent in the second quarter and a revised 3.4 percent in the first.

Meanwhile, Turkey's current-account deficit narrowed for the 12th straight month in October as slowing economic growth curbed demand for imported goods and gold sales to Iran and the U.A.E. boosted exports.

U.S. approves deployment of Patriot air defense missiles to Turkey

U.S. Defense Secretary Leon Panetta signed an official deployment order on his way to Turkey to deploy two Patriot air defense batteries and 400 American military personnel to Turkey as tensions intensify with neighboring Syria. Panetta landed at the Incirlik air base in Turkey on December 14 as part of a tour that has also taken him to Afghanistan and Kuwait.

The missiles are expected to become operational at the end of January, officials said. In addition, NATO will send Turkey special aircraft that can detect missile launches from Syria.

Iranian army chief of staff Gen. Hassan Firouzabadi warned Turkey over the weekend against stationing NATO anti-missile systems on its territory, saying such a move risks conflict with Syria. Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad canceled a planned visit to Turkey following the decision.

DOMESTIC POLITICS

Ergenekon trial grows bigger amid protests

Despite protests both inside and outside the courthouse, the court hearing the Ergenekon coup plot case agreed to merge another indictment with the ongoing case on December 13. A state prosecutor was expected to sum up his case last week against the defendants accused of membership of “Ergenekon,” an alleged underground network of nationalist coup plotters. However, contrary to expectations, the prosecutor did not make his final arguments, instead reading the new indictment. The defendants’ lawyers objected to the newly merged indictment, which centers around a group of suspects accused of providing arms to Ergenekon.

Thousands of protestors, led by main opposition Republican People’s Party (CHP), the Workers’ Party (İP) and the Turkish Youth Union (TGB), protested the trial in front of the 13th High Criminal Court in Istanbul’s Silivri district.

Turkish ex-leader's body shows poison, death cause unclear

The exhumed body of Turkey's late President Turgut Özal, who led the country out of military rule in the 1980s, contained poison but the cause of death was unclear, local media reported an autopsy as showing on December 12. Özal died of heart failure in 1993 but was suspected of being poisoned. The body was exhumed in October, after a report commissioned by current President, Abdullah Gül, and the Chief Prosecutor's Office in Ankara recommended subjecting the body to modern-day methods for examination, to finally clear the question mark over his death.

Turkey's government to update terror law for press freedom

Deputy Prime Minister Bülent Arınç said Dec. 15 that Turkey's Anti-Terror Law would be reinterpreted in order to secure press freedom. "We agree on making more up-to-date interpretations of propaganda in articles 6 and 7 [of the Anti-Terror Law, which declares printing announcements of or making propaganda on behalf of a terrorist organization a crime]. We think an article, a report or a speech may not constitute a crime as long as it does not provoke violence or arming," Arınç said at the "Future of Media and Communications in Turkey" conference held by the Media Council of the Turkish Union of Chambers and Commodities Exchanges (TOBB) in Bolu.

Turkey seizes drugs, guns, ammo in raid on Kurdish rebels

Turkish security forces backed by helicopters seized an estimated $22.5 million worth of marijuana along with guns and fertilizer in a swoop against suspected Kurdish militants on December 15, officials said. Hundreds of soldiers, police and special forces carried out the coordinated raids in seven villages around the southeastern city of Diyarbakır, seizing drugs, guns, ammunition and ammonium nitrate, which can be used to make explosives, officials said. Turkish officials say the drug trade is a major source of funding for Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) militants.
